Vanished

Pork-smearing woman missing

A 24-year-old Ashland woman who was caught on surveillance camera hurling bacon at the Framingham police station and saying, "It's time to feed the pigs," is now missing, CBS Boston reports.

Lindsey McNamara was last seen at P.F. Chang's in Natick on Saturday night with a man and woman unknown to her family, her sister said in a Facebook post.

Police arrested McNamara in December after she allegedly took raw bacon and sausage out of a Dunkin' Donuts box and rubbed it on the police dispatch window.

A judge last week dismissed malicious destruction of property charges against McNamara. METRO

Bulger's girlfriend won't cooperate

Catherine Greig, the longtime girlfriend of convicted Boston mob boss James "Whitey Bulger," is reportedly refusing to help investigators locate her former lover's hidden assets, The Boston Globe reports.

Greig, 63, is serving an eight-year sentence for helping Bulger remain in hiding for more than 16 years, and is now declining to testify before a federal grand jury in Boston about Bulger's assets. The alleged stunt could mean more jail time for Greig, who was reportedly offered immunity if she testified. METRO

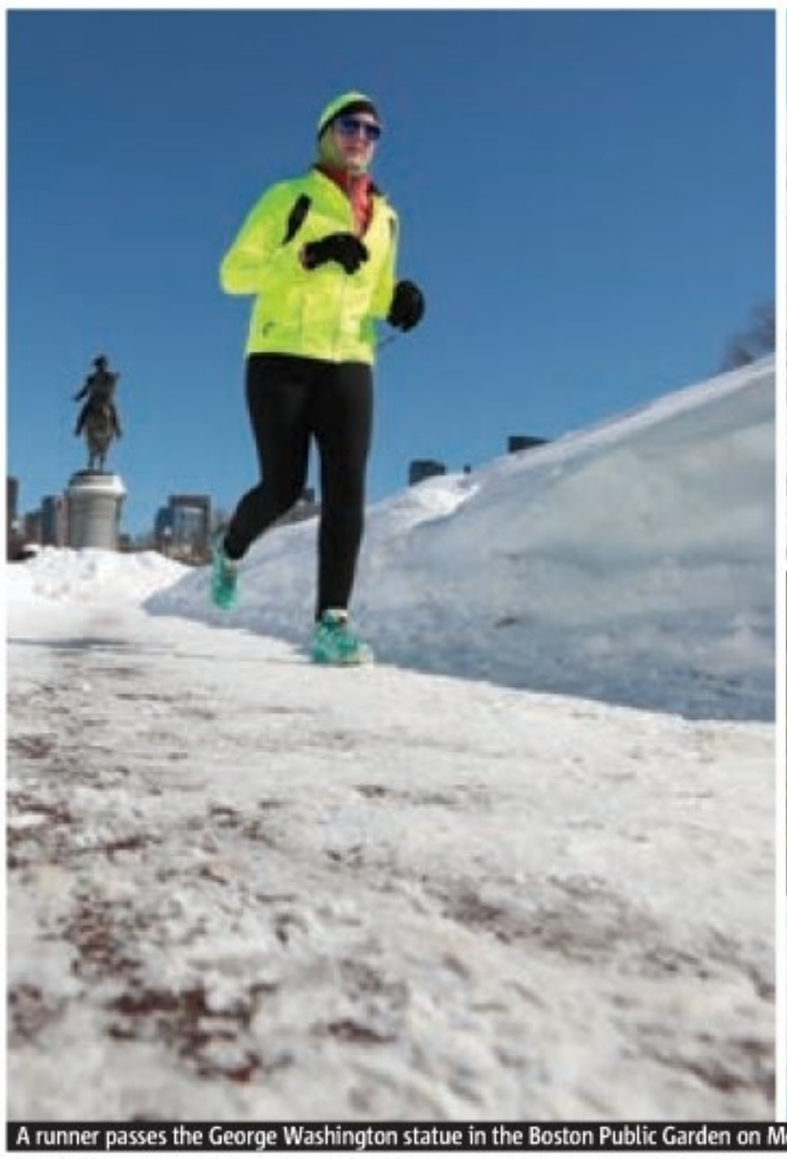
Roslindale plow hits resident

A snow plow reportedly struck a pedestrian at the corner of Corinth and Cohasset streets in the Roslindale neighborhood Monday afternoon, The Boston Globe reported, citing police officials. The incident occurred around 1 p.m., Boston police said. Police are investigating. No other information is known at this time, including the victim's condition. METRO

T won't be back for 30 days, Scott says



A runner passes the George Washington statue in the Boston Public Garden on Monday, Presidents Day. / NICOLAUS CZARNECKI, METRO

Boston. Prepare for a full month of chaos, as public transit remains snarled by snow.

It's no joke: The T won't be returning to regular service for another 30 days.

As Boston reeled with another snow hangover Monday — a dark, desolate state of mind brought on by nearly 8 feet of snow in the past three weeks — outgoing MBTA chief Beverly Scott heaped more bad news onto the already towering pile.

The recent stretch of bad weather has wreaked so much havoc on the T's aging equipment and infrastructure, stalling trains and burying tracks, that the agency won't be able to restore full service to trains, subways, trams and buses for another month.

"As long as we don't get hit with another storm like the last one, it will be back in 30 days," Scott said at a news conference late Monday.

"This last round really crippled our infrastructure and our vehicle fleet," said Scott, who last week turned in her resignation. "It created operational challenges and created severe damage which will take time to recover from."

Scott plans to stick around until April.

Meanwhile, Mayor Marty Walsh reminded beleaguered Bostonians to behave, and be patient, after videos of locals BASE jumping into giant snow drifts appeared on the Internet. "This isn't Loon Mountain, this is the city of Boston," Walsh said Monday morning

After the scolding, he made nice: "I have been struck by how Bostonians have pulled together through the storms. They are bringing out the best in our city," he said.

One man died of a heart attack while shoveling, he said, in Boston's first snow-exhaustion death this winter. A total of 16 inches of snow fell in the most recent storm, that ended on Monday, covering the city in 7.5 feet since January 23. Boston is closing in on the most snow for a season in recorded history — 107 inches. February is also now the snowiest February on record, with 58.5 inches.

A Boston parking ban will remain in effect until further notice, and some city center streets have been turned into one-way thoroughfares to ease traffic.

Arctic temperatures and a bitter wind chill were expected into early Tuesday, with — wait for it — 3 to 4 inches more snow Tuesday between 9 a.m. and 3 p.m., Walsh said. Flurries may also arrive Wednesday, and, in case you haven't had enough, another storm is approaching for the weekend.

Southie tires slashed over saved spots

At least two cars in the South End have had their tires slashed in disputes over shoveled-out parking spaces, with whisperings of a third, The Boston Globe reports.

The neighborhood is the first to formally ban the practice of reserving shoveled parking spots with common and sometimes comical household items.

One of the vandalism victims, Boston school teacher Chris Busch, told the Globe he had three of his tires slashed after parking in a space he had not shoveled, when his own spot was taken.

Edelman tops list of Boston's 50 most fashionable

The beard rules. Julian Edelman and Taylor Schilling are city's top fashion influencers.

Edelman and Schilling / GETTY IMAGES

Julian Edelman, the Patriots' 28-year-old wide receiver, is the city's most fashion-forward celebrity, catching the attention of listmaker US Trendy after rocking his Grammy presentation gig last week.

"We wanted to get behind a Bostonian that was on the rise," US Trendy founder Sam Sisakhti said of the bearded Pat. "Considering the Super Bowl win, he is someone who is really getting out there and representing Boston. Also, he takes risks. He has a very versatile style."

The Boston-based website helps designers make a name for themselves in the fashion industry.

Edelman's gridiron partner, quarterback Tom Brady, came in 7th place — up from 27th place in 2014. Edelman even outdistanced Brady's wife, Brazilian-born former top model Gisele Bundchen, who was only the third most fashionable Beantowner this year.

The list isn't a "best dressed" roundup, Sisakhti said, but rather focuses on the Bostonian's influence on fashion.

Orange is the New Black's Taylor Schilling took second place, middle-age man on the block Donnie Wahlberg took fourth place, and television personality Maria Menounos finished fifth.

"Taylor is just killing it on all the red carpets. She is a fresh face out there. Her look is minimalistic, but she always has a polished, feminine look," he said.

In 2011, GQ magazine called out the city as the worst dressed in the nation. But since then, Boston has managed to up its fashion game.

"I've been getting asked less and less why I am in Boston," Sisakhti said. "So I can kind of gauge where we stand based on that. Another interesting thing that is happening — a lot more movies are being filmed in Boston. As a result, a lot more celebrities are coming through as well, and shopping on Newbury Street."

Boston's Lauren Antos of Lily and Migs, a designer for US Trendy, says Boston should be cut some slack considering the dismal weather conditions.

"We've had 90 inches of snow. For most people, sweat pants are the clothing of choice," said Antos, whose company offers comfortable chic women's wear.

"But the city has evolved. Now there are so many avenues for local designers and fashionistas in Boston," Antos said.

A resident clears a roof on Church Street in Waltham on Monday.
NICOLAUS CZARNECKI/METRO

Fears rise over roof collapses

Snow. Conditions are perfect for roof collapses, according to a risk engineer.

Can snow collapse the roof of a Boston building? It's a question of when, not if, Mayor Marty Walsh said.

The mayor implored Bostonians to hire contractors to remove snow from their roofs after more than 7 feet crashed down on the city in the past three weeks.

Roofs have already collapsed in Stoughton, Newburyport, Upton and Quincy. In Portsmouth, New Hampshire, 215 families will be out of their homes for a week after two collapses at an apartment complex.

Conditions are ripe for roof collapses.

"The loads keep building up and the weather hasn't warmed where the previous snow has melted," said Jim Breitkreitz, a risk engineer with commercial insurance company Zurich Services Corporation.

The amount of snow a roof can handle varies wildly — it depends on the type, size and pitch of the roof, among other things.

Breitkreitz said building owners should have an engineer evaluate their roofs now to determine how much snow and ice it can handle and how much is currently there.

Elevation changes in the roof can cause drifts, he said. Clogged drains are the genesis of many collapsed roofs, as snow and ice build up because there is no drainage.

Commercial building owners should look for deflection in the steel beams that hold the roof deck up or sprinkler-heads poking down a couple inches more than usual from a hanging ceiling. Any unusual creaking or groaning does not bode well, either. Doors that don't close anymore are also a solid indicator that "you might have a loading problem."

But don't try to remove snow yourself, Breitkreitz said; get a pro. And stay vigilant if and when melting starts.

"Right now, the worst thing that could happen is warmer weather that only partially melts snow, followed by rain. Clogged drains would force the existing snow to soak up all the rain, making them extremely heavy," Breitkreitz said. "That would be a very bad scenario."

Fire and ice. Blaze guts two homes in Waltham, killing mom, 75, and son, 49

A pair of fires — one of which left a mother and son dead — gutted homes in Waltham Monday morning as the coldest temperatures in a decade froze the region.

The first, a two-alarm blaze on Ash Street that began shortly after 2 a.m., killed Eric Miller, 49, and his mother, Elizabeth Miller, 75.

Shortly after 8 a.m., a four-alarm fire swept through a home about a mile away, on School Street.

Another two-alarm fire caused about $100,000 worth of damages to a large apartment complex on Centre Street in Jamaica Plain.

Fire investigators determined the cause of that blaze was careless disposal of smoking materials.

The fire affected at least three of the structure's 147 apartments designed for elderly housing. There were no major injuries reported.

"This tragic loss of life remains under investigation," said Middlesex District Attorney Marian Ryan. "Incidents like this serve as a reminder to all of us to make sure smoke detectors are in working order and to do our part to shovel out fire hydrants to help first responders."

Wind chills hit 28 below on Monday. DANNY MCDONALD

Waltham fire crews received help from surrounding towns to battle a four-alarm fire on School Street Monday morning. High amounts of snow and freezing temperatures made battling the blaze difficult.

Egypt bombs ISIL targets in Libya after beheadings

Video. The 21 Egyptian Coptic Christians were marched to a beach, forced to kneel and then beheaded.

Egyptian jets bombed Islamic State targets in Libya on Monday, a day after the group there released a video showing the beheading of Egyptian Christians, drawing Cairo directly into the conflict across its border.

Egypt said the strike hit militant camps, training sites and weapons storage areas in the neighboring country, where factional fighting has unleashed virtual anarchy and created havens for jihadi Islamists.

While Cairo is believed to have provided clandestine support to a Libyan general fighting a rogue government in Tripoli, the 21 decapitations pushed President Abdel Fattah al-Sisi into open action, expanding his battle against Islamist militancy.

"And let those near and far know that the Egyptians have a shield that protects and preserves the security of the country, and a sword that eradicates terrorism," the Egyptian military said in a statement.

Egyptian state television aired footage of fighter planes leaving a hangar with "Long live Egypt" emblazoned on their tails, followed by night-vision aerial footage showing bomb explosions and the aircraft returning in early daylight.

Libya's air force also participated in Monday's attack, which targeted Derna, regarded as a base for Islamic State.

Libyan air force Commander Saqer al-Joroushi, who is loyal to Libya's internationally recognized government, which set up camp in the city of Tobruk after losing control of the capital Tripoli, said there would be more strikes on Tuesday. REUTERS

Truce violated

Battle rages for town, rebels reject cease-fire

Pro-Russian rebels pounded encircled Ukrainian government forces on Monday and Kiev said it would not pull back heavy guns while a truce was being violated, leaving a peace deal on the verge of collapse.

The European Union kept pressure on Russia and the rebels by announcing a new list of separatists and Russians targeted with sanctions, to which Moscow promised an "adequate" response.

Fighting subsided in many parts of eastern Ukraine under a cease-fire that came into force on Sunday, under the deal reached last week in marathon talks involving the leaders of France, Germany, Russia and Ukraine.

But the truce appears to have been stillborn in Debaltseve where the most intensive fighting has taken place in recent weeks.

"The situation is fragile," said German Chancellor Angela Merkel, the driving force behind the deal reached on Thursday after all-night talks in Minsk. REUTERS

"It was always clear that much remains to be done. And I have always said that there are no guarantees that what we are trying to do succeeds. It will be an extremely difficult path." Merkel

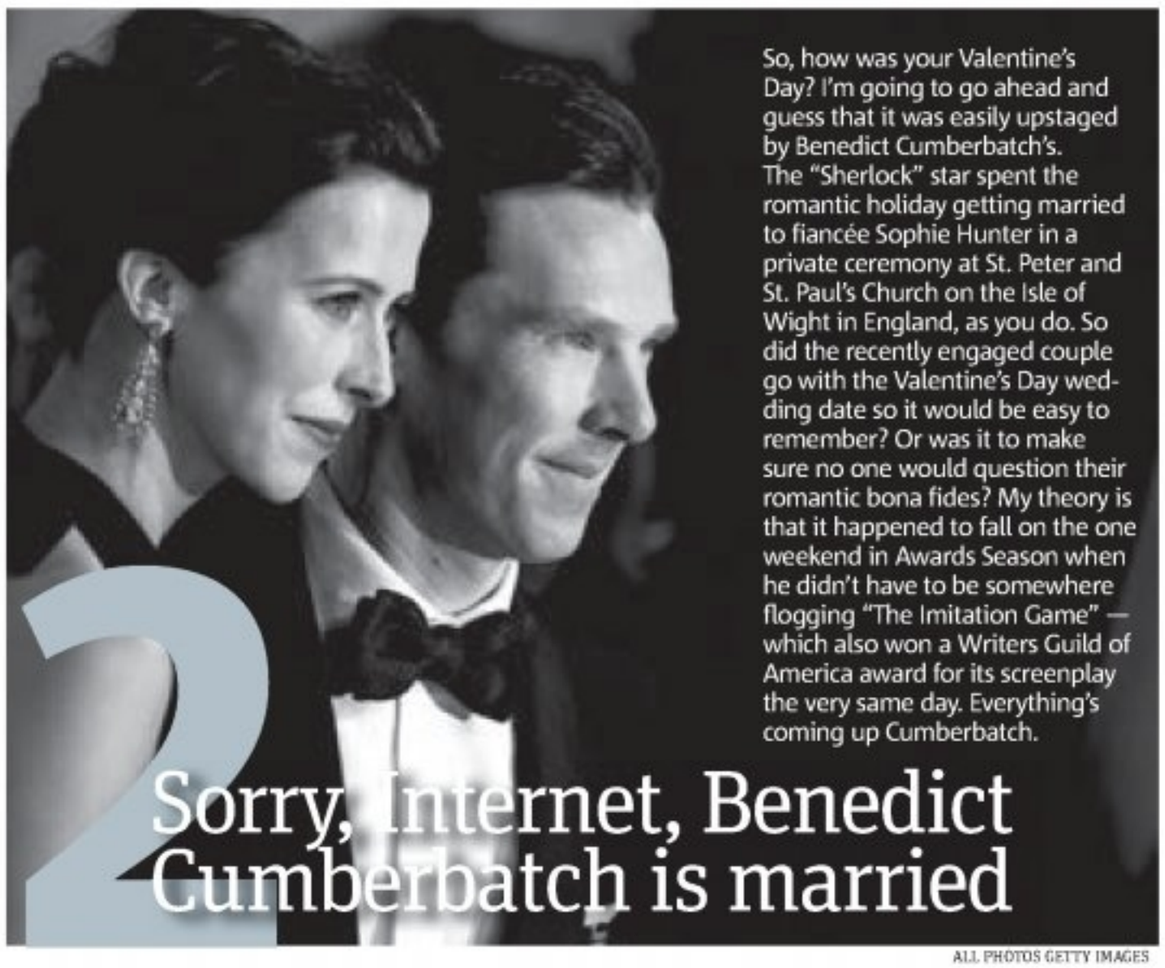
Justin Bieber is Naomi Campbell's new BFF

Justin Bieber may be the fashion world's problem now, as he's been tearing it up at New York Fashion Week, blonde locks and all. He's been rubbing elbows with Kanye West, besting challengers at ping pong and rocking some truly questionable leather jackets and a hilariously wispy mustache. Not only that, but the Biebs scored himself a front-row seat for Naomi Campbell's Fashion for Relief event and got to be paraded around backstage by the hostess herself. They were even spotted holding hands, which might be more a Naomi Campbell affectation than signs of a burgeoning romance, but still. Hey, maybe she can finally get through to Bieber that the shirts that look like mini-dresses look stupid on him.



Sorry, Internet, Benedict Cumberbatch is married

So, how was your Valentine's Day? I'm going to go ahead and guess that it was easily upstaged by Benedict Cumberbatch's. The "Sherlock" star spent the romantic holiday getting married to fiancée Sophie Hunter in a private ceremony at St. Peter and St. Paul's Church on the Isle of Wight in England, as you do. So did the recently engaged couple go with the Valentine's Day wedding date so it would be easy to remember? Or was it to make sure no one would question their romantic bona fides? My theory is that it happened to fall on the one weekend in Awards Season when he didn't have to be somewhere flogging "The Imitation Game" — which also won a Writers Guild of America award for its screenplay the very same day. Everything's coming up Cumberbatch.

How do you get Tom Hanks, Meryl Streep, Bradley Cooper, Eddie Murphy, Chris Rock and Jim Carrey together for a pizza party? Make sure it's hosted by Sir Paul McCartney. Ahead of the "Saturday Night Live" 40th anniversary show, McCartney did a surprise Valentine's Day show Saturday night at New York's Irving Plaza, with a slew of VIP "SNL" guests in attendance backstage. So to keep them happy he ordered a bunch of pizzas. Now, while that might seem weird coming from super eco-friendly vegetarian poster child Paul, it's OK because the pies, from Neapolitan Express, were totes GMO-free. So chow down without feeling guilty, Meryl.

Alyson Stoner's Missy Elliot tribute

You may know Alyson Stoner best as a regular on Disney Channel fare like "The Suite Life of Zach and Cody" or from three of the various "Step Up" films, but she got her start even earlier. Like, as a little kid earlier. And the recent Super Bowl-fueled resurgence of Missy Elliott offered the perfect opportunity for Stoner to say thanks to the hip-hop icon for giving her career a jump-start nearly 15 years ago, when Stoner was the kiddie dancer in Elliott's videos "Work It," "Gossip Folks" and "I'm Really Hot." "I dedicate this video to Missy Elliott herself," Stoner says in the video. "Missy, thank you so much for the opportunity to dance for you and now carve a path of my own."

‘Second Girl’ is no ‘Downton’

Review. This behind-the-scenes Eugene O’Neill riff doesn’t quite come together.

Stronger characters might have elevated the drama in “Second Girl.” / T. CHARLES ERICKSON

“The Second Girl,” the Huntington Theatre Company’s latest, takes place in the kitchen of the Tyrone family from Eugene O’Neill’s classic play “Long Day’s Journey Into Night.” Unfortunately for those of us watching playwright Ronan Noone’s saga of the family’s domestics, all of the compelling drama happens in O’Neill’s story.

Unlike their employer, the kitchen help and chauffeur are little more than one-dimensional stock characters played by talented actors doing their very best with no dramatic arc and a wisp of a plot. They each speak of their American dream, but the obstacles appear to be too daunting for them to attain it.

The pedestrian story might be entertaining if the characters were engaging, funny, or even dark and twisted. But these three are just dull and predictable, the antithesis of the enthralling folks from TV’s “Downton Abbey” and “Upstairs, Downstairs.”

It doesn’t help that James Ingalls’ lighting design sometimes leaves the audience straining to see. Sure, you’re trying to demonstrate that the employer is so cheap you have to keep the lights low, but there are ways to effectively create this on stage without going completely dark. The subsequent, hasty sunrises aren’t much better.

On the plus side, Santo Loquasto’s set is, like most Huntington sets, appealing and appropriate for the time and place. The running water and working stove are especially authentic touches that provide a perfect opportunity for the smell of bacon cooking to fill the theater.

Kathleen McElfresh nicely portrays the stiff, aging cook, Bridget O’Sullivan, with an air of sad resignation that’s somewhat painful to watch. Christopher Donahue’s Jack Smythe is a man who mixes both desperation and overeagerness, while MacKenzie Meehan nicely imbues her likable Cathleen O’Leary with optimism and hope, against all odds.

If only they had a better story to tell.

The Breakthrough: Taron Egerton

The facts

- Who: Taron Egerton
- Where you may have seen him: The 25-year-old English actor had a key role on the 2014 British TV drama "The Smoke."
- Where he is now: His first feature is as the protagonist of "Kingsman: The Secret Service," in which he plays a young Londoner recruited to try out for the titular, super-secret agency, alongside no less than Colin Firth and Michael Caine.
- Where he's going: He's playing Tom Hardy's lover in Brian Helgeland's "Legend," about noted gangster brothers the Krays (both played by Hardy), and "Testament of Youth" with Kit Harington and Alicia Vikander.

Introductions.
The young star of 'Kingsman' tells us about acting with legends and his unlikely first role.

Was he nervous to act alongside legends?: "I get asked this question a lot, and I think it's about this desire to romanticize it. I didn't walk in expecting to trip over my shoelaces while blubbering. They were just very, very friendly. Colin left me a message the night before to make sure I was relaxed. You meet them in the flesh and they're normal blokes. They're just millionaires and I'm not."

His Wikipedia page says he has stage combat experience. Is this true?: "I'd done a very small amount of stage combat. That's Wikipedia kind of fodder, really. They look at the profile on my drama school's website, which is written in management-speak — designed to make you look like you have a skill set when you actually don't."

The film's portrayal of a low-income kid made over into a gentleman: "I think if you checked in with the character after the film he'd still be wearing the clothes he was wearing at the beginning. I don't think the film is in any way saying [he changes]. There's nothing wrong with who he is at the start. There are certain things wrong with his life, but they are not synonymous with his low income or his background."

Taron Egerton shares some brandy with Michael Caine in "Kingsman: The Secret Service," in theaters now. / JAAP BUITENDIJK

His first role: "I was 15 when I started. I played a 'mechanical' in 'A Midsummer Nights Dream.' The 'mechanicals' are the players who did the play for the king and queen. My character played a woman in the play. So my first role I was dressed up as a woman. I was in a red cocktail dress. That's when I fell in love with acting, while I was in drag. Can't wait to do it again."

The standout

Public School

Ladies and gentlemen, meet the puffer cape. Public School distilled two of fall's biggest trends — the poncho and the puffer — into one giant cloud-like garment that looked more like a blanket than a coat. We guarantee every editor in attendance wished she had one this week.

Reviews

Prabal Gurung

A trip to the Adirondacks in upstate New York inspired Prabal Gurung's collection of oversize funnel-necked sweaters, fur-trimmed velvet coats and Native American-inspired patterns, which appeared on the designer's signature slit-up-to-there dresses.

Gurung has proved he can do sexy multiple times (the frocks felt a little been-there-done-that), but the coziness here was new. The deconstructed fair isle knits, particularly in a figure-hugging midi dress, felt fresh.

RAQUEL LANERI

DKNY

DKNY's city badass gets fancy for fall, tricking out the season's big menswear-inspired trend with sparkly details like bedazzled undone ties on tailored suits or jewel embellishments on a tough bomber.

The outerwear was the star of the show: Smart, clean wool coats in gray, camel, navy and herringbone grabbed attention. No flash necessary.

TINA CHADHA

DVF

"Girl you work it" lyrics from The Weekend's new single for "50 Shades" seduced as models hit the runway. Working it is exactly what the women who wear DVF's unabashedly sexy collection will do.

While the daywear just hinted at sexuality (the classic decolletage-exposing wrap dress, a fitted pinstripe suit and coquettish florals), it's evening when the femme fatale comes out, with slinky slipdresses, red lace cocktail numbers and some oh la la, leave-little-to-the-imagination gowns. TC

Jason Wu

At Jason Wu's slightly subversive fall outing, the designer showed exceptionally tailored trousers, demure dresses with eyebrow-raising slits and luxe fur stoles in military green, inky black and soft gray.

Wu, who's dressed first lady Michelle Obama for a fancy occasion or two, knows his way around gorgeous evening wear. This season he kept it fuss free: beaded T-shirt gowns, a shiny black jumpsuit, and a light-as-air white crepe halter that was just breathtaking. Oscar nominees, are you reading? TC

Derek Lam

New York literati like Diane Keaton and Katharine Hepburn inspired the long, billowy trousers and '70s-tinged tweed suits in Derek Lam's refined collection.

But we were also charmed by the knits: The cool opening navy V-neck with elbow patches, ever so slightly oversize hazelnut colored crewneck or any of the polished wool turtlenecks will be supersmart buys. TC

Toys. Crayola steps up the coloring game

Ashlee Simpson's son Bronx tries out the new Crayola Color Alive coloring books. / PROVIDED

When we were kids, the best thing about coloring was getting to use the 64-pack of crayons with the built-in sharpener. That's no longer enough to impress kids these days, so Crayola has gone back to the drawing board to reinvent this favorite childhood pastime.

The new Crayola Color Alive Coloring Pages take what kids color and make their creations come alive using a digital app (because, of course). Compatible with iOS, Android and Windows devices, parents can download the app for free on Crayola's website, the App Store or Google Play.

After kids finish coloring their picture in one of the books (which retail for between $1.99 and $5.99, the same price as low-tech coloring books), they can scan their creation and an animated version will show up on the app. So if they color in a dragon, it will fly and breathe fire in the digital version.

Kids can even insert themselves into their creation by taking a selfie, which will show up in the digital version of their coloring creation. They can also save their characters so they can play with them later and can share them with their friends — or super impressed grandparents.

Horoscope

Aquarius | Jan. 21-Feb. 18
Stay in the background, where you can watch and learn. Adopting a bold stance will not be to your advantage, but knowing where you stand will give you the upper hand.

Pisces | Feb. 19-March 20
You will have an incredible impact on others. Discuss your intentions and map out your plans. Your contribution to a cause will result in respect.

Aries | March 21-April 20
If change is required, you should take action. Waiting for someone else to make a move will waste valuable time. You have the know-how, so stop procrastinating.

Taurus | April 21-May 21
Have fun by becoming involved in creative activities. Include the youngsters in your life and it will bring you closer together. A little can go a long way, so you shouldn't go overboard.

Gemini | May 22-June 20
Your ideas won't go far if you keep them bottled up. Share your thoughts and take part in events. The more people you meet, the more allies and support you will recruit.

Cancer | June 21-July 22
Keep a close watch on your wallet. If someone comes to you with a tale of woe, help out with suggestions or advice and keep your money safe and secure.

Leo | July 23-Aug. 22
It is time to step back and re-evaluate a current partnership. Staying involved with someone for the wrong reasons will not bring good results. Discuss your feelings, and make changes.

Virgo | Aug. 23-Sept. 22
The extra effort needed to maintain a healthy lifestyle will pay off. If you slip, don't beat yourself up. The important thing is to keep striving to reach your goal.

Libra | Sept. 23-Oct. 22
It's hard to get serious about your future if you remain stuck in the same routine and habits. Shake off the cobwebs and get down to business.

Scorpio | Oct. 23-Nov. 21
Question your commitment to someone or something. It's not fair to lead someone on or to put in half the effort if you have lost interest. Be true to yourself and what you want.

Sagittarius | Nov. 22-Dec. 21
Making extra time for the people who count in your life will be appreciated. Negotiations will prove to be fruitful. Strive to excel.

Capricorn | Dec. 22-Jan. 20
Handling finances for other people will be risky and thankless. Without the proper precautions, you will end up facing some serious losses. Consult a professional. EUGENIA LAST

A healthy, holy diet

This Wednesday marks the beginning of Lent, the 40-day period before Easter, when many Christians abstain from animal foods in remembrance of Jesus' 40 days of fasting in the desert before launching his ministry. But meat-free Lent is much more than a symbol of religious devotion to Christ. It helps reduce the risk of chronic disease, environmental degradation, and animal abuse. Dozens of medical reports have linked consumption of animal products with elevated risk of heart failure, stroke, cancer, and other killer diseases. A 2007 U.N. report named meat production as the largest source of greenhouse gases and water pollution. Undercover investigations have documented farm animals being beaten, caged, crowded, deprived, mutilated, and shocked. Lent offers a superb opportunity to honor Christ's powerful message of compassion and love by adopting a meat-free diet for Lent an beyond. After all, it's the diet mandated in Genesis I-29 and observed in the Garden of Eden.

Our supermarkets offer a rich array of plant-based meat and dairy alternatives, as well as the more traditional vegetables, fruits, and grains. Entering "vegan recipes" in our favorite search engine offers more products, recipes, and transition tips than we can use.

That's cold

A decision was made not to shut down the commuter rail on Monday. On Presidents' Day the rail runs on a Saturday schedule. On the MBTA site it states: "Commuter rail service is expected to have delays due to switch and signal issues with locomotives. Cancelled train trips are also likely." The trains on Saturday run only every few hours. Most people aren't working, but the few people who would ride it are going to be waiting outside in the frigid weather. Who made this decision that makes no sense at all?

NY HITS ROCK BOTTOM

How low have things gotten in New York when it comes to pro sports?

Fans are actually sad to see Amar'e Stoudemire leave town.

During the city's glory days, an injury-prone, ringless superstar player who never lived up to a monster free agent deal would have been driven straight to JFK without a thank you and most likely with a parting middle finger. It really, truly wouldn't have mattered or not if he was a "nice guy."

Instead, the back-and-forth between Stoudemire and Knicks fans got pretty sappy, pretty quickly Monday afternoon after it was announced in the a.m. that he and the Knicks had reached an agreement on a buyout.

Stoudemire posted a poem on his Instagram account Monday, thanking the city:

"NY NY what a beautiful city, a place where you can hang out with Anna, Jay-Z and Diddy; It's a place absent of excuses and patience, if you're smart you can meet leaders of every nation; NY NY big city of dreams, everything in NY isn't always what it seems; In the land where the jungle is concrete, the money flows Dow Jones and Wall Street; Home of #STATcity and the #Knickstape Originator, Shalom to all my fans, Salute to all my haters. Peace and Love, Amar'e Carsares Stoudemire Sr."

Touching. It reads like something that was written by a 12-time champion and someone who had spent his entire career in NYC (he spent eight years in Phoenix, compared to just five in New York).

A couple of Tweets from Knicks fans Monday: @CMSexton: "Amar'e, you were a great Knick. You got us Melo, and your streak of 30 point games was one of the best stretches of Knick fandom in years."

"@jstar277 Amar'e thanks for being a great #knick #nyk"

Really?

Oh, and you know those pointless CBS "Sports Radio minutes" on The Sports Hub in which John Feinstein rambles on about Georgetown girls lacrosse and Maryland basketball? Some Presidents Day Feinstein fill-in actually said, "thank you" to Amar'e on behalf of Knicks fans.

Seriously, what am I missing, here?

The love coming out of New York on Monday for Amar'e Stoudemire was a bit much. / GETTY IMAGES

Lust and basketball

Porn star Lisa Ann says she is retired from the business, but that doesn't mean she's done bedding men half her age.

Ms. Ann told GQ magazine that she "prefers" NBA players to all other walks of human life and that she scouts the NBA draft each year for her next conquests. Lisa Ann was in New York this past weekend for the gold mine of potential NBA gold diggers, All-Star weekend, and was no doubt impressed by the prospects of Andrew Wiggins, last year's No. 1 pick.

It appears as though Lisa Ann was hoping to spend more than a New York minute with the young star, as on Friday night she re-tweeted some generic game stories of Andrew Wiggins playing well in something called the Rising Stars Challenge (Re-tweeting game stories is the best way to any man's heart, of course).

At the very least, Wiggins is the right age for the actress as she said in the GQ interview that she's not big on NBA vets.

"I'm looking at 18, 19, 20-year-old guys. They're my little specimens."

NHL power rankings | by Rich Slate

No. 1

Predators (38-12-6)

Nashville bolstered its depth by trading for Toronto defenseman Cody Franson and forward Mike Santorelli on Sunday, signaling that they are really going for it all this season.

No. 2

Blues (37-15-4)

The second-best team in the NHL also resides in the Central Division. St. Louis has won its last three games and is 8-2-0 in its last 10. The Blues are tied with Chicago for best goal-differential at plus-41.

No. 3

Canadiens (36-15-4)

The top two teams in the East are having quite a battle in the Atlantic Division. Montreal and Tampa Bay both have 76 points but the Habs have done it in three fewer games and are 7-2-1 in their last 10.

No. 4

Lightning (35-17-6)

Tampa Bay kicked off its five-game road trip by detroying San Jose. Things figure to get tougher for the Lightning in Anaheim Wednesday. Tampa Bay's goal-differential is an impressive plus-33.

No. 5

Ducks (35-15-7)

With Frederik Andersen on IR (neck), the Ducks are scuffling a bit (4-5-1) in their last 10 games). The good news is that no matter what happens, it is next to impossible for the Sharks to catch them.

No. 6

Blackhawks (35-18-4)

The Blackhawks are picking it up (5-3-2 in their last 10) and are now in fourth place in the West. Marian Hossa (17 goals, 25 assists) is on fire, as he had two goals in three straight games last week.

No. 7

Islanders (37-18-1)

The Islanders have bounced back with four wins in a row. It is a big week for them as they host the Predators on Wednesday and have dates with Washington and Vancouver this weekend.

No. 8

Red Wings (31-13-10)

The Red Wings dropping four spots from lat week is more of a function of the teams around them playing really well. Detroit is set to head-out on a season-high six-game road trip.

No. 9

Penguins (32-15-9)

The Penguins are 6-3-1 in their last 10 games and they were right there before dropping a 2-1 shootout in Chicago on Sunday. Saturday's game in St. Louis should be interesting.

Belichick on Brady

Bill Belichick opened up to Duke basketball coach Mike Krzyzewski about his relationship with Tom Brady on the college coach's Sirius XM radio show this past weekend. Via ESPN: "Tom and I have a great relationship and it really started in 2001 when he became the starting quarterback. ... Over the last 14 years, Tom and I, along with the other quarterbacks meet twice a week. ... Tom definitely has a lot of input. ... When you ask him at the end of the play what happened, he'll tell you nine or 10 things that happened — with the rush, the way the defense played, the way the route was run, what he saw. You go back and look at the film and that's the way it happened. So he's able to process a lot of information in just a couple of seconds there."
